ABOUT SANGIRO

WHY THE NAME SANGIRO?

The name of our abattoir, Sangiro,
was adopted from a pseudonym of the famous writer,
Dr Andrew Abraham Murison,
Andrew Abraham Pienaar.

Andrew (commonly known as Sangiro)
was born in the year 1907, to Annatjie Bosman, where he abattoir currently is situated.

Sangiro has been operating as a poultry abattoir since the 1970, however, it was the takeover by Mr Andrew Wilkinson in March 2012, which really drew its success, and since then we continued to provide a quality product, which is now loved, around South Africa.

FACTS ABOUT SANGIRO

As we all go in "Know your farmer, Know your food" agenda, we firmly believe our high-quality product starts at the farming level.
through a highly lucrative relationship with Sangiro sister company, Avon Chicken Farming.
Avon Chicken Farming is a company which PR Mitchinson, Andrew Wilkinson and Mr Willie van Niekerk.
Currently there are 22 farms supplying the Sangiro abattoir.
All are still owned by Mr Willie van Niekerk.

BROILERS USED BY AVON

Ross 308, Arbor Acres and Cobb broilers are used due the fact that they have the best genetics available in South Africa.
They have the fastest growth rate with the lowest feed conversion.
